For nearly 20 years, the ITRC has published an analysis of how people are impacted by identity crimes. Not just the financial impacts, which are increasingly substantial, but also the effect on relationships at work and home, physical and mental health, and the emotional toll having your identity misused has on a person. There is also a lost opportunity cost for victims that is often hard to measure, but provides valuable insight into how to help victims recover from having their identities misused.

Some of the comments are heartbreaking: “Found out that the individual has collected more than $200,000 in my name; my life is just ruined.” And others make clear the frustration people feel when they are thrust into a situation they do not understand and are ill-equipped to handle: “No one appears to care.”

I thought that I had resolved my ID theft incident until the culprit tried to file my income taxes.

I have been homeless over 19 months because my identity has been stolen.

I felt very violated. He called me and threatened me over the phone and text.

The 1st time (my identity was stolen) I was almost taken to jail in another state on a warrant after a person used my name, age. The 2nd time: my computer and phone were taken over remotely. The 3rd time someone changed my email address on my (bank) account; this person is opening cards in my name and (the bank) will not give me any information.

These are the words of some of nearly 15,000 people who contacted the ITRC in 2021 seeking no-cost assistance. They are reflective of the stories we hear every day.

We, however, do care.

Thousands of people speak with the ITRC's victim assistance experts every year. More than one million visitors come to our website for preventative education materials. In this report we also point out that there are thousands more victims who are seeking help but may not know where to turn.

For the first time, we are comparing the experiences of the general U.S. population regarding identity crimes with the victims of identity misuse who contact the ITRC. You will see the scope, scale, and impact of these crimes on people is even more prevalent than what we have always suspected.

This report also includes a special focus on an identity scam that has grown in the past 12 months by more than 1,000% - social media account takeover. It may be easy to dismiss this type of identity crime as a mere inconvenience, but as you will see it has a profound financial and emotional impact on people.

Please read this report and consider what you would do if you were the victim of an identity crime. And, if you are, remember that we are here to help you – every step of the way.

About the 2022 ITRC Consumer Impact Report

Since 2003, the ITRC has surveyed the identity crime victims¹ who have contacted the Center to gauge the impact of identity compromises on individuals. Numerous studies by government agencies and private organizations focus on the financial impacts of identity-related crimes, but the primary purpose of the ITRC Consumer Impact Report is to gauge the emotional, physical, and practical effects on the day-to-day lives of victims including lost opportunities. This year's report reflects the responses of 120 victims who contacted the ITRC between April 2021 and March 2022.

In 2021, the ITRC responded to requests for direct assistance from a record high number of individual consumers through our contact center - 14,947. More than 7,412 were victims of identity scams and another 4,168 were victims of identity misuse as a result of their personal information being compromised. You can read more about identity abuse and misuse in our first-ever Trends in Identity Report published in August 2022.

¹This report is based on survey responses from two groups of identity crime and compromise victims: Individuals who contacted the ITRC by telephone or live-chat and consumers who did not contact the ITRC but who nonetheless were self-reported victims of an identity crime or compromise. An identity crime involves the theft and/or misuse of a personal information.

As you'll learn in that report, new forms of identity attacks are emerging or re-emerging. Social media account takeover has risen by more than 1,000% in just one year along with a specific attack targeting Google Voice users. And, after years of preferring to take over existing financial accounts, identity criminals are opening new banking and credit accounts by impersonating consumers using information stolen in data breaches or coaxed out of individuals in phishing attacks.

We sought additional input specifically from victims whose social media accounts were compromised. Once viewed as more of an inconvenience, you'll see the responses of 97 victims who contacted the ITRC reflect the impacts of the loss of access to a social media account is more significant than first believed.

The numbers above, though, only reflect the experience of victims who contacted the ITRC. To get a broader view of the trends and impacts affecting consumers in general, this year we asked 1,371 consumers in an online survey if they had been the victim of an identity crime, and if so, how did it impact them. Responses from this broader set of self-identified victims using similar questions asked of victims who contacted the ITRC shows both significant differences and common experiences.

Demographics

The profile of a “typical” identity crime victim who contacts the ITRC varies a little from year-to-year. In 2021, most victims were women; most victims were 55 years of age or older – 56 percent – with the remaining spread across all adult age groups. The percentage of victims who self-report annual income below $50,000 USD was 55 percent (55%) compared to the 45 percent (45%) who reported high annual earnings – 20 percent (20%) of whom reported income in excess of $100,000.

Victims with at least some college or a college degree contact the ITRC for assistance far more frequently than victims who only have a high school diploma or less. Based on 2021 U.S. Census race and ethnicity data, victims who contacted the ITRC skewed higher than the U.S. population among African-American communities and lower among Asian Americans/Pacific Islanders and significantly lower among victims of Hispanic origin.

2022 CONSUMER IMPACT REPORT

idtheftcenter.org • 1-888-400-5530

The 2022 Consumer Impact Report goes beyond the known financial implications of identity crimes and explores the lost opportunities, as well as the emotional, physical and psychological impacts experienced by victims resulting from the crimes.

This is Not the First Incident...

3% Decrease Since 2021

Victims Whose Incident Has Yet to be Resolved

Due to the complex nature of the identity attacks against ITRC Victims, cases take longer to resolve than those of General Victims.

Changings in Financial Losses

In a year-over-year data comparison, 2022 ITRC Identity Theft Victims reported:

This year, 36% of General Victims reported their financial losses due to an identity theft incident totaling less than $500.

Only 6% of General Victims reported their financial losses totaling more than $10,000.

Changing Habits Can Minimize Risk

3% Decrease Since 2021

Emotional and physical effects due to identity theft are on the rise for victims.

ITRC Victims Who Reported Experiencing Negative Emotions and Feelings

This year, 66% of General Victims reported experiencing negative feelings and emotions.

ITRC Victims Who Reported Physical Problems

In 2022, 66% of General Victims reported experiencing physical problems.

We asked the victims of various identity crimes a series of questions regarding the nature and longvetiy of the incident, financial losses, and future preventative actions. We also asked about their personal impacts, including affected relationships, emotional struggles, and physical problems.

How long did you spend dealing with this identity theft?

ITRC victims experience more complex attacks that require longer to resolve, and the percentage of “unresolved cases from the previous year” has grown by 18% since 2021. Nearly two-thirds of General Victims are able to resolve their identity cases within 30 days, but only 18% of ITRC Victims are able to restore their identities within a month.

Financial Impact

What is the approximate total dollar value of everything the identity criminal stole?

Overall, identity crime victims are losing less money. Most ITRC Victims and General Victims report losing less than $500. However, one group of ITRC Victims grew from 9% in 2021 to 30% in 2022 – victims who lose $10,000 or more.
